WILLIAMS REUNION IS GREAT SUCCESS

Large Crowd Attends Tenth Annual Picnic, Near Martha.

INTERESTING EXERCISES

Speeches and Base Ball Games Features of Program that Made Day Enjoyable to All—Preparing for Next Year's Reunion.

Ideal weather and a tremendous crowd contributed to the success, on Saturday last, of the tenth annual reunion of the Williams family, at Miles' grove, near Martha. It was a day of enjoyment to all, the success of the event reflecting much credit upon the management.

From Julian, Port Matilda, Unionville and in fact every other spot in that part of the county visitors arrived at the picnic grounds by trains or wagons, buggies, carriages and automobiles. Owing to a mix-up in railroad plans the early afternoon train from Bellefonte did not stop at the grounds and a crowd of over 100 were compelled to walk back from Martha station. However it was a happy, good-natured crowd and nobody seriously complained at having to walk.

From all directions came members of the Williams clan. The presence of so many handsome women and strong, well-built men, bearing the Williams blood in their veins, fully explained the pride of the members of this family in their annual reunions. The very best of order prevailed during the entire day.

A morning and afternoon program had been arranged but so much time was taken up in the early part of the day in greeting old friends and making new ones that it was decided to defer all speech-making until after the dinner hour. Shortly after 2 o'clock the exercises were called to order by A. S. Williams, of Port Matilda, president of the reunion association, a little stand having been erected for the accommodation of the several speakers. The other officers of the association are William B. Williams, Martha, vice-president; R. R. Hartsock, Julian, secretary, and County Treasurer G. G. Fink, of Martha, treasurer. Mr. Fink was originally chosen for this position because of his wide popularity and incidentally because the County Treasurer's vaults afford a splendid place for the safe-keeping of the association's funds.

The obituary committee reported the following deaths in the last year: Mrs. A. Y. Williams, Port Matilda; Miss Effie Bodle, Punxsutawney; Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Williams, Chicago, Ill., and Grant Williams, of Penfield.

President A. S. Williams appointed the following committee to select officers for next year's picnic: William B. Williams, Joseph Williams, B. P. Williams and H. F. Williams, of Martha, and A. B. Williams, Port Matilda.

The Port Matilda cornet band furnished the music for the occasion, rendering several very pretty selections during the exercises. After an address of welcome by Walter H. Williams, of Port Matilda, Representative J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte, spoke in response, being followed by Rev. William Beach, of Port Matilda; Lawyer Clement Dale, of Bellefonte, and Rev. S. S. Bergen, of Petersburg. The exercises were brought to a close with a recitation by little Marie Hoover, of Julian, which was delivered with as much grace and ease as would be expected from one much older and which was greatly enjoyed by all within hearing of her childish voice.

During the afternoon the Martha baseball team took the Philipsburg club and spanked it to the tune of 8 to 2. Earlier in the day the Martha boys lost to Philipsburg by the score of 10 to 9, but Martha should have won hands down. In the afternoon game she trounced Philipsburg to prove that the morning score should not be taken too seriously.

At the morning game the Martha team was composed of Pierce, first base; Steel, right field; Wiser, pitcher; Hardy, short stop; Burke, catcher; Hutchinson, second base; Clancy, third base; Stiver, centre field, and Robinson, left field. The Philipsburg team was made up of Goldthorp, catcher; Woomer, left field; Miller, right field; Nelson, pitcher; Kayler, short stop; Hickson, second base; Barto, third base; Williams, first base, and Oscewalt, centre field.

Pierce and Hutchinson made two runs, each, and Steel, Wiser, Hardy, Burke and Robinson, one each, for Martha, at the morning game. For Philipsburg Goldthorp made four runs, Woomer three; Oscewalt, two, and Miller, one. S. T. Richards, of Martha, was the umpire.

The Martha team was changed somewhat at the afternoon game. Hardy was put in as pitcher and put up a splendid game in the box. A. Tomko and P. Tomko played second base and centre field, respectively. P. Tomko played like a man with a dozen hands, pulling down everything that came anywhere near him. Marks, at third, was another change. For Philipsburg, Barto went into the pitcher's box, and Nelson succeeded him at third.

Martha took the lead in this game in the first few innings and never allowed Philipsburg to make any headway. The scoring was done by P. Tomko and Marks, with two runs, each, and A. Tomko, Burke, Pierce and Wiser, one each. Woomer and Miller scored the two runs which saved Philipsburg from a shut-out. Arthur Herrington, of Julian, umpired this game. As umpire he not only knew his business but insisted on attending to it himself. His decisions were protested several times by Philipsburg but in each case he proved to be in the right and could not be bluffed. A large crowd witnessed this game and everybody was glad to see Martha win.

MANY CHILDREN DIE OF CHOLERA INFANTUM

Epidemic Prevalent in Centre County Worst in Six Years.

RELIEF NEXT MONTH

Physicians Say Disease Will Not Be Checked Until End of "Dog Days"—Three Deaths in One Day Last Week—Other Children Critically Ill.

An epidemic of cholera infantum, that has been prevallent in Centre County, for the last few weeks, has, according to physicians, caused the death of more children than has been the case in any similar period in the last five or six years. In one day, Friday, of last week, three children succumbed to this disease, which is the dread of all mothers. Many other children are seriously ill, inclufling Mildred, the pretty little daughter of Recorder and Mrs. William H. Brown.

Physicians say there is little likelihood of checking the epidemic before the end of "dog days." July and August are the months when cholera infantum leaves its trail of sorrow in so many homes. Last year, however, there were comparatively few deaths from this source. About six years ago Bellefonte and other points in Centre County experienced an epidemic much similar to that which, in the last few weeks, has stilled the hands and voices of so many little ones. The coming of September is anxiously awaited in scores of homes, because of the relief anticipated with the change in the weather.

After lingering between life and death for several days Virginia Bullock two and one half years old, died Friday evening, about six o'clock, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forest L. Bullock, on East High Street.

Marie Lulu Lohr, the eighteen-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lohr, of Roopsburg, died on the same day, following an acute attack of cholera infantum, thought to have brought on by eating green grapes. Jesse L. Justice, the seven-months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. James I. Justice, of Valley View, Benner Township, died, Friday afternoon, following an illness of about one week.

Other children whose death has occured in the last few weeks included Eleanor Louise Beezer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Beezer, of Bellefonte; James Martin Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, of Pleasant View; Ruth Loretta Grubb, daughter of Mr, and Mrs. James Grubb, of Half Moon Hill and Robert Malone, Jr., son of Robert Malone, of Snow Shoe.

BAILEYVILLE PICNIC

Great Crowd Attends Annual Event at Beaver Dam Grove.

Fully 3000 persons were in attendance at the annual Baileyville picnic, which was held last Saturday at Beaver Dam Grove. Every family for miles around took the day off for a little of the enjoyment that may be found only at the Baileyville picnic with the result that the crowd was larger than ever before and the event a greater success than even those of recent years.

Base ball games, foot races, potato races, etc., helped entertain the crowd during the morning and afternoon. At the morning base ball game Baileyville was defeated by Dungrove, by the narrow margin of 8 to 7. During the afternoon there was another game, this time between Tyrone and State College. Tyrone was a little bit too strong, defeating State College, 6-4.

The Baileyville picnic is the biggest event of the year in that end of the county and the perfect weather on Saturday was a large factor in making the occasion so enjoyable to all. The best of order prevailed during the entire day which was splendid tribute to the management and the crowd, itself.

Edgar James Rote.

Edgar James Rote, the ten-year-old son, of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Rote, formerly of Bellefonte, but now of Wilkinsburg, died, Friday morning, at the home of his parents, from typhoid fever. He was a member of the United Brethren church. The funeral was held, Monday, in Bellefonte, Rev. D. Barshinger in charge.

Mrs. William Haney.

Mrs. William Haney, of Millheim, died on Monday morning, at her home in that town. She was aged about 70 years.

OPENING OF SCHOOLS

Statement Explaining How Pupils Will Be Grouped.

In order that school children in Bellefonte may understand the plans for grouping them while the new school building is being constructed Principal Jonas E. Wagner has issued the following statement:

All departments of the Public Schools of Bellefonte will open on Monday, September 6th. On account of the limited room at our disposal, the organization of the work will not be as complete as desirable, yet we feel that if all parents will cooperate with the teachers in this transitional stage, more than the usual results can be guaranted when the pupils are admitted into the new building.

While the structure is being completed, the following order will be carried out: The High School and Midway will hold full day sessions. The remaining grades will meet in the Brick Building-one half beginning at 8:30 and continuing to 12.00 o'clock; the other half from 1.00 to 4.30 o'clock. All pupils entering the First Grade will report to Misses Alice and Bessie Dorworth, in the morning. Pupils promoted to Miss McCaffrey's and to Miss Barnes' rooms will also report in the morning. Pupils promoted to Miss Gertrude Taylor's room will report at the same place to Miss Maud Harshberger, in the forenoon.

In the afternoon pupils going to Misses Helen Crissman, Helen Harper and May Taylor will report regularly. Those advanced to Miss Longacre's room will report to Miss Underwood, and those to Miss Harshberger's room and to Miss Underwood's room will be consolidated under Miss Gertrude Taylor, except a certain number who will be sent to the Midway. Miss Carrie Weaver will conduct the Junior Grammar grade in the Midway, and Miss Jennie Longacre, the Senior Grammar room.

Examinations for entrance to the High School or Grades, and for the removal of conditions will be held in the Brick Building, on Friday September, 3d, at nine o'clock in the morning.

The Bellefonte Academy will open its Fall session in the academic and A. intermediate grades on Thursday afternoon. Sept, 9, at 2 o'clock. The B. intermediate and primary departments will open in the same building, corner of Spring and Bishop Streets, on Monday morning, Sept. 13, at 9 o'clock.

The prospects for a large attendance are bright. The instructors are exceptionally strong and will be in charge, as follows: Rev. James P. Hughes, A. M., principal emeritus, mathematics and coaching of backward pupils; Professor James R. Hughes, A. M., headmaster, latin and oratory; Arthur H. Sloop, A. M., assistant headmaster, physics, chemistry and higher mathematics; Helen E. Overton, preceptress, elementary branches; Isabella S. Hill, Ph. B., principal of ladies department, English rhetoric and literature; Jennie Harper, elementary branches; Rev. J. Allison Platts, Ph. D., Bible lectures; Sherwood E. Hall, A. B., history, ancient languages and civics; Gilbert H. Whiteford, B. S., business manager, book-keeping, physical geography and mathematics; Harold F. Sabine, Ph. B., French and German; Frank H. Streightoff, A. B., higher mathematics; D, M. Evans, A. B., mathematics and director of athletics.

Barbridge Still at Large.

Peter Barbridge, the Slav, who escaped, last Wednesday night from Deputy Sheriff James B. Strohm, by jumping off a train near Port Matilda, has not been captured. It is most likely that he made for somewhere around Philipsburg, where it is probable that some of his countrymen filed the handcuffs off his arm and helped him to escape. The Tyrone police are keeping watch over Barbridge's house, at that place, expecting that eventually he will visit his wife. After escaping from Deputy Strohm Barbridge slept that night in a corn field, near Port Matilda. Beyond that nothing has been learned as to his whereabouts.

Maurer—Shank.

Miss Rosa Maurer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maurer, of South Philipsburg, and William Shank, of Marion county, Kansas, were married, Friday evening, at the home of the bride.

The young couple expect to reside in Kansas, where the groom is successfully engaged in business.

GRANGERS PLANNING FOR GREAT PICNIC

Predict Record-Breaking Attendance at 36th Exhibition.

GEO. T. OLIVER COMING

Republican State Chairman Andrews also Accepts Invitation to be Present Sept. 16—Senator Sisson and J. A. Stober May Attend.

"Greater Than Ever" is the slogan of the Central Pennsylvania grangers in planning for their thirty-sixth annual picnic, which will be held at Grange Park, Centre Hall, September 11-19. Everything indicates that their expectations will be more than realized—that this year's picnic will be the most successful in the history of grangers' reunions.

A number of new tents have been purchased since last year's picnic, and quite a few will be borrowed from the Williams Grove association. Applications for space thus far indicate that the number of campers will run far ahead of any recent year. The same is true in regard to applications for space for exhibition purposes.

One of the most interesting features of this year's picnic will be the exhibition of poultry in the new building, which has just been completed. Another feature will be a cattle display, by George Bradford. It is predicted by the management that this exhibition will be the largest of the kind in Pennsylvania. Chairman Leonard Rhone, assisted by the committee, George Dale, George Gingrich and G. L. Goodhart, has charge of the picnic arrangements, and anticipates that the attendance will be the largest in the history of the association.

On Thursday, September 16, United States Senator George T. Oliver, and Republican State Chairman W. R. Andrews will attend the picnic. It is possible that Senator Sisson, of Erie, and former Senator J. E. Stober, of Lancaster, the Republican nominees for Auditor General and State Treasurer, respectively, also will be present. This will be Senator Oliver's first visit to the grangers' picnic. Since the adjournment of Congress Senator Oliver has been in Canada, but a letter from him a day or two ago expressed his intention to be present unless prevented by some unlooked-for emergency. State Chairman Andrews is at Atlantic City, preparing to open the Republican State headquarters, at Philadelphia, next month. A letter from him a few days ago announced his pleasure to accept an invitation to attend the picnic with Senator Oliver.

Senator Penrose expected to be on hand for the one day, but his trip to the Rocky Mountains necessitated a change in his plans. Governor Stuart will attend if his duties at Harrisburg do not interfere.

BOLD HIGHWAYMEN

The Beech Creek Victims to Chairs and Ransack House.

The home of Edward Williams, of Beech Creek, was boldly broken into, Sunday night, by three masked men, who held up and bound Mr. Williams and his daughter, Lulu, and then proceeded to ransack the house, securing $300 in cash.

Mr. Williams is about 60 years old and lives with his wife and two daughters, one-half mile east of Beech Creek. On Sunday night, one daughter, Carrie, was visiting with neighbors and the family had gone to bed early. About midnight they were awakened by the sound of a door being smashed in. Mr. Williams and his daughter ran down stairs and were confronted by three masked men, who grabbed them and bound them to chairs. Mrs. Williams escaped during the excitement. The desperadoes then ransacked the house, and found $300 in Mr. Williams' vest, all the money that he had earned by cutting railroad ties during the summer. The robbers cautioned Mr. Williams to be quiet or forfeit his life, and then silently left. They were last seen walking down the railroad tracks, near Beech Creek.

Claster—Steinfeldt.

Members of the well known Claster families, of Lock Haven, attended the wedding, at Harrisburg, on Tuesday, of Miss Ida Rose Claster, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac B. Claster, and Isaac Steinfeldt, of Lancaster. Lester and Joseph Claster, of Lock Haven were among the ushers, while Miss Gertrude Claster, also of Lock Haven, was one of the bridesmaids.

BELLEFONTE LOSES

Defeated by Renovo, 5--4, After Seven Straight Victories.

YESTERDAY'S GAMES.

Bellefonte	4
Renovo	5
Jersey Shore	6
Lock Haven	2

STANDING OF TEAMS.

	W	L	PC
Lock Haven	15	13	.535
Renovo	15	13	.535
Jersey Shore	13	15	.464
Bellefonte	12	14	.461

Bellefonte went down to defeat before Renovo on the home grounds, yesterday, the score being 5--4. The result was a great disappointment to a large crowd which was on hand to cheer for the home team. A victory would have tied Bellefonte and Renovo for second place.

Jersey Shore defeated Lock Haven yesterday, 6--2. This, with the result here, ties Lock Haven and Renovo for first place. Bellefonte is again in fourth place, although but a few points behind Jersey Shore.

Yesterday's defeat for Bellefonte is the first after seven straight victories.

Renovo gained a wide lead on Bellefonte early in the game, but the crowd was brought to its toes, in the eighth, when Bellefonte tallied three runs and came within one of tieing the score. The ninth made no change, Renovo leaving the field victorious.

Bellefonte had three men on bases in the first inning but could not score, owing to poor base running. Three of Renovo's runs were not earned but resulted from errors by Bellefonte. Both pitchers, Klepfer, for Bellefonte, and Mack, for Renovo, were hit freely. Turner, for Bellefonte, brought in two runs with a beautiful drive over second base. An error by him, however, was responsible for one of Renovo's runs.

Renovo scored two runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the seventh. Bellefonte scored one in the fifth and three in the eighth.

Today Bellefonte plays at Lock Haven, and tomorrow the two teams meet here. Two rattling games are thus assured, and Bellefonte will do its best to capture both. On Saturday Bellefonte plays two games at Renovo. On Tuesday Bellefonte plays at Jersey Shore and on the following day the two teams play a double-header here. On Friday, of next week, Bellefonte plays at Lock Haven and winds up the season with two games at Jersey Shore, on Monday, September 6, Labor Day.

With the pennant within striking distance Bellefonte has been baseball wild for the last week or more. Two weeks ago no one in town had any thought that the home team could get within seeing distance of first place. Now all Bellefonte is talking pennant, dreaming pennant and figuring out the numerous ways in which the home taam can land the coveted prize.

That the wind-up of the league contest is going to be red hot is demonstrated by the activity of the management of the teams in Lock Haven, Renovo and Jersey Shore. Players are being purchased right and left. High-priced batteries are in demand. Every weak spot to be found is being strengthened for the closing games, for it is apparent to all that the pennant is to be won or lost in the last few days of the season, which closes September 6.

Including today's game at Lock Haven Bellefonte has ten games to play with the three other clubs in the league. With these ten games to be disposed of it is possible for Bellefonte to capture the pennant. That the contest has narrowed down to one between Bellefonte and Lock Haven is the prevailing belief, and the rivalry between these two towns has reached the boiling point.

The prospects for continuing the wonderful winning streak of the last ten days are more than good. The Bellefonte boys are going at a fast clip and are playing to win. With the addition of Moore, who pitched such a strong game against Lock Haven, on Tuesday, Bellefonte's quota of twirlers is much above the average. Moore pitches a speedy ball and again a slow puzzling drop which fools the heaviest hitters on the opposing teams. He was recently secured from Huntingdon, where he put up a star game.

Business Men's Ball Game.

We have had some nifty base ball games in the last few weeks, but nothing compared with what will be pulled off tomorrow, at Hughes Athletic Field, when the business men of Lock Haven and Bellefonte clash for supremacy. Some of the merchants will close their stores while the game is on; others will remain open and pray for the success of their home colleagues. But its going to be a hummer of a game, so don't miss it. Game called at 3 o'clock, sharp.

The Man From Home

A Novelization of the Play of the Same Name

"I'm glad you've come," he said. "I've got something here I want to read to you. When I got your letter at home I wrote to Jim Cooley, our vice consul in London, to look up those Hawcastle folks and write me here how they stand."

"You did that!" she cried in anger. "You had the audacity to pry into the affairs of the Earl of Hawcastle!"

"Why, I'd 'a' done that if it'd been the governor of Indiana himself," he replied, with surprise. "Besides, Jim Cooley's 'home folks.' His office used to be right next door to mine in Kokomo. I haven't opened the letter yet, but I haven't much doubt but Jim 'll have some statements in it that'll show you I'm right about these people."

"How do you know that?" she demanded heatedly.

"Because I've had experience enough of life"—

"In Kokomo?" she asked scornfully.

"Yes, ma'am," he answered. "There's just as many kinds of people in Kokomo as there is in Pekin, and I didn't serve a term in the legislature without learning to pick underhand men at sight. Now that earl, let alone his having a bad eye—his ways are too much on the stripe of T. Cuthbert Bentley's to suit me. T. Cuthbert was a Chicago gentleman, with a fur lined overcoat, that opened up a bank in our town, and when he caught the Canadian express three months later all he left in Kokomo was the sign on the front door. That was painted on. But, there, here's the letter. Read it for yourself."

He handed it to her and watched her while she broke the seal and then began to read:

Dear Dan—The earldom of Hawcastle is one of the oldest in the kingdom, and the St. Aubyns have distinguished themselves in the forefront of English battles from Agincourt and Crecy to Sebastopol. The present holder of the title came into it by accident. He was a younger son's younger son and had spent some years in Russia in business under another name. Nothing here in his English record is seriously against him, though everything he has is mortgaged to the handle.

She finished with a look of triumph.

"What a terrible indictment!" she said scornfully. "So that was what you counted on to convince me of my mistake? I shall tell Lord Hawcastle that you will be willing to take up the matter of the settlement the moment his solicitor arrives."

Pike shook his head sadly.

"No, I wouldn't do that, because I won't take up any settlements with him or any one else."

"Have you after this any objection to my alliance with Mr. St. Aubyn?" she inquired, her anger at white heat.

"It isn't an alliance with Mr. St Aubyn you're after," he replied calmly. "You're after something there ain't anything to. If I'd let you buy

"What a terrible indictment!" she said.

what you want you'd find it as empty as the judgment day the morning after. You think because I'm a jay country lawyer I don't understand. Why, we've got the same thing at home. There was little Annie Hoffmeyer. Her pa was a carpenter and doing well, but Annie could not get into the Kokomo Ladies' Literary society, and her name didn't show up in the society column four or five times every Saturday morning, so she gets her pa to give her the money to marry Artie Seymour, the minister's son, and a regular minister's son he was! Almost broke Annie's heart and her pa's, too, but he let her have her way and went in debt and bought them a house on Main street. That was two years ago."

Pike paused momentarily.

"Annie's working at the deepo candy stand now," he resumed, "and Artie's working at the hotel bar—in front—drinking up what's left of old man Hoffmeyer's—settlement!"

She flung away from him in a temper and then wheeled on him in a flash.

"And you say you understand—you, who couple the name of a tippling yokel with that of a St. Aubyn, whose ancestors have fought on every field of battle from Crecy and Agincourt to the Crimea!"

"But you won't see much of his ancestors!" complained Pike.

"He bears their name," she answered.

"That's it, and it's the name you want. Nobody could look at you and not know it wasn't him! It's the name! And I'd let you buy it if it would make you happy—if you didn't have to take the people with it. Don't you see they're counting on it? The earl—he's counting on living on you." The Indianian became excited. "Why, a Terre Haute pickpocket could see that! And this old Lady Creech—she's counting on it, and this Frenchwoman that's with them—isn't she trying to land your brother? The whole kit and boodle of them are on the track of John Simpson's money!"

"I gave Almeric my promise. It was forever, and I shall keep it," she answered slowly, as if she had been impressed with his earnestness. He looked at her quietly.

"I'm not going to let you," he replied.

"Then I'll throw your interference to the winds. I shall marry without your consent."

"Do you think they'd let you?" Pike asked quickly. For a moment she stood still, and then came the sound of the guitars from over the wall. Pike went on after a time.

"Sounds kind of foreign and lonesome," he said. "I'd rather hear something that sounded more like home—'Sweet Genevieve,' for instance. You know it, don't you?"

"I used to," she answered, hanging her head. "It's old fashioned and common, isn't it?"

"That's why I like it, I guess," he answered. "I couldn't get you to sing it for me before I go home, could I?"

She looked at him thoughtfully for a moment.

"I'm afraid not," she answered and went quickly into the hotel, leaving him looking after her curiously.

CHAPTER XIV.

BLACKMAIL.

PIKE was still standing with the letter in his hand, looking after Ethel, when he awoke to the realization of what her words meant to him. She had given her promise, and she did not mean that anything in the world should make her revoke it. That promise was sacred to her, just as if it had been spoken before a clergyman.

In his heart Pike knew he would have to give in if he was to make her happy, and yet he knew that in making her temporarily happy he would be making her eternally miserable. If he could have the strength to hold out against her and refuse to sanction the marriage he knew the crew of aristocrats would never accept her without the cash, and that by the terms of John Simpson's will could never be theirs without his consent.

Of his own hopes he could see but the faintest glimmering. He had irretrievably offended the girl, and she would hate him all her life for it, he feared. His entrance into her new phase of life had been unfortunate. His continuance in it was little else than an insult, according to her way of thinking. And Jim Cooley, whom he had trusted to find the flaw in the Hawcastle escutcheon that he knew had existed, had failed him miserably.

The lawyer felt that he was a long way from home. He sighed and turned to where the sun was sinking in a haze of red across the bay. Then he heard the voice of Horace and chiming with it the cultured accents of Lord Hawcastle. Apparently they were coming to seek him. She had reiterated his refusal.

Wearily he turned again to the automobile and leaned against it. As he did so he heard Horace say:

"But Ethel says Mr. Pike positively refuses."

In return he heard Hawcastle reply:

"Leave him to me. In ten minutes he will be as meek as a lamb."

Dumbly Pike wondered what fresh argument the earl had to offer and mentally steeled himself against it. As he looked up he encountered the steady glare of the earl.

"My dear Pike," began the latter, "there is a certain question"—

"I said I would not discuss that with you. I meant what I said," observed Daniel quietly.

"This is another question," went on the other, heedless of the warning or at least unaffected by it.

"Late this afternoon I developed a great anxiety concerning the penalty prescribed by Italian law for those fortunate and impulsive individuals who connive at the escape or concealment of certain unfortunates who are wanted by the police."

Daniel looked at him, with a smile.

"So you're all worked up about that, are you?" Hawcastle glared at him, but went on.

"So deeply that I ascertained the penalty for it. For the person whose kind heart has so betrayed him the penalty is two years in prison, and

"HE'D TELL YOU HE'D SEE YOU IN HADES FIRST."

Italian prisons, I am credibly informed, are—unpleasant."

Pike ruminated and folded his letter.

"Being in jail ain't much like an Elks' carnival," he observed.

"Even a citizen of your admirable country could not escape if his complicity were proved—if he were caught in the act. I will be plain with you."

These last words had an ominous note. "Let us imagine that a badly wanted man appeared upon the pergola here and made an appeal to one of your countrymen who, for the purposes of argument, is at work upon this car. Say that the too amiable American conceals the fugitive under the automobile and afterward, with the connivance of a friend, deceives the officers of the law and shelters the criminal, say, in a room of that lower suit there."

He looked about in the growing twilight and pointed dramatically to the window. Pike, now thoroughly interested and with his pulse beating a rapid tattoo, followed his finger. The earl went on:

"Imagine, for instance, that the shadow which appears upon that curtain were that of the wanted man. Would you not agree then to a reasonable request?"

Daniel swallowed painfully, for he saw in some manner that that swaying window curtain which had caught his eye an hour ago had held a distinct menace. It seemed too bad that this should be the end of it all—all the defenses he had raised for the girl of his dead friend should be swept away in an instant by a bit of folly.

"What would be the nature of that request?" he asked.

"It would concern a certain alliance—might concern a certain settlement," the earl replied softly.

"If the request were refused, what would the consequences be?" Pike went on, with lowered eyes, for he would not trust himself to meet those of the nobleman.

"Two years at least in prison for the American."

"Looks bad for—that American, eh?" Pike inquired whimsically.

Schedule for the Amendments.

Section 12. That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that—

In the case of officers elected by the people, all terms of office fixed by act of Assembly at an odd number of years shall each be lengthened one year, but the Legislature may change the length of the term, provided the terms for which such officers are elected shall always be for an even number of years.

The above extension of official terms shall not affect officers elected at the general election of one thousand nine hundred and eight; nor any city, ward, borough, township, or election division officers, whose terms of office, under existing law, end in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten.

In the year one thousand nine hundred and ten the municipal election shall be held on the third Tuesday of February, as heretofore; but all officers chosen at that election to an office the regular term of which is two years, and also all election officers and assessors chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven. All officers chosen at that election to offices the term of which is now four years, or is made four years by the operation of these amendments or this schedule, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. All justices of the peace, magistrates, and aldermen, chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifteen. After the year nineteen hundred and ten, and until the Legislature shall otherwise provide, all terms of city, ward, borough, township, and election division officers shall begin on the first Monday of December in an odd-numbered year.

All city, ward, borough, and township officers holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of December of that year.

All judges of the courts for the several judicial districts, and also all county officers, holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of January, one thousand nine hundred and twelve.

A Tiger in Wales.

Some years ago it was reported that a tiger had escaped from a traveling menagerie at Brecon, in Wales. Mangled sheep were said to mark its course across country to Llandrindod Wells, some farmers lost their dogs and on market days at Builth, Brecon, Penybont and Llanmarrach the wild beast was the center of rumor. Country schools were closed because parents feared to let their children go along the roads, and bands of armed men sought to hunt the tiger down.

This state of terror lasted a week, though no person was found who had actually seen the tiger, but only people who "had heard that some one else," and so forth. Then the truth was hunted down and the origin of the whole affair discovered at the remote hamlet of Eberedw. One night the schoolmaster there, in dismissing the children, playfully had warned them not to loiter in going home lest a tiger should get them.

The scared children accepted the warning as real and hastened home with stories of a savage beast lurking behind hedges or growling in ravines. And so the story grew, as stories do under the culture of imagination.

How to Relieve Ivy Poisoning.

Orange juice is a simple remedy for ivy poisoning. Bathe the afflicted part of the body. The itching and burning will cease, and in a few days the skin will peel without any further spreading.

Peroxide and sugar of lead in solution are both excellent remedies, but SUGAR OF LEAD IS A POISON and must not be left where it may be swallowed by mistake.

THE LATEST IN SUMMER DON'TS

Most people have a collection of hot weather don'ts. Here is a list:

Don't work too hard.

Don't think too hard.

Don't fail to play.

Don't, if you are a man, wear a waistcoat.

Don't, if you are a woman, fail to remember that nature did not mean you to be a harnessed, curveless creature with no dimension save length, but instead a being whose whole body, in summer especially, should be allowed to breathe.

DON'T WORRY.

Don't hurry.

Don't wear black.

Don't lose your temper.

Don't forget to bathe often.

Don't scold the children.

But do drink water early, often, late.

Don't feed a baby every time it cries. The chances are it needs water more than food.

Don't wait until your own throat is parched and then gulp down drafts of ice water. Every time you have nothing else to do swallow a little more cool, pure water.

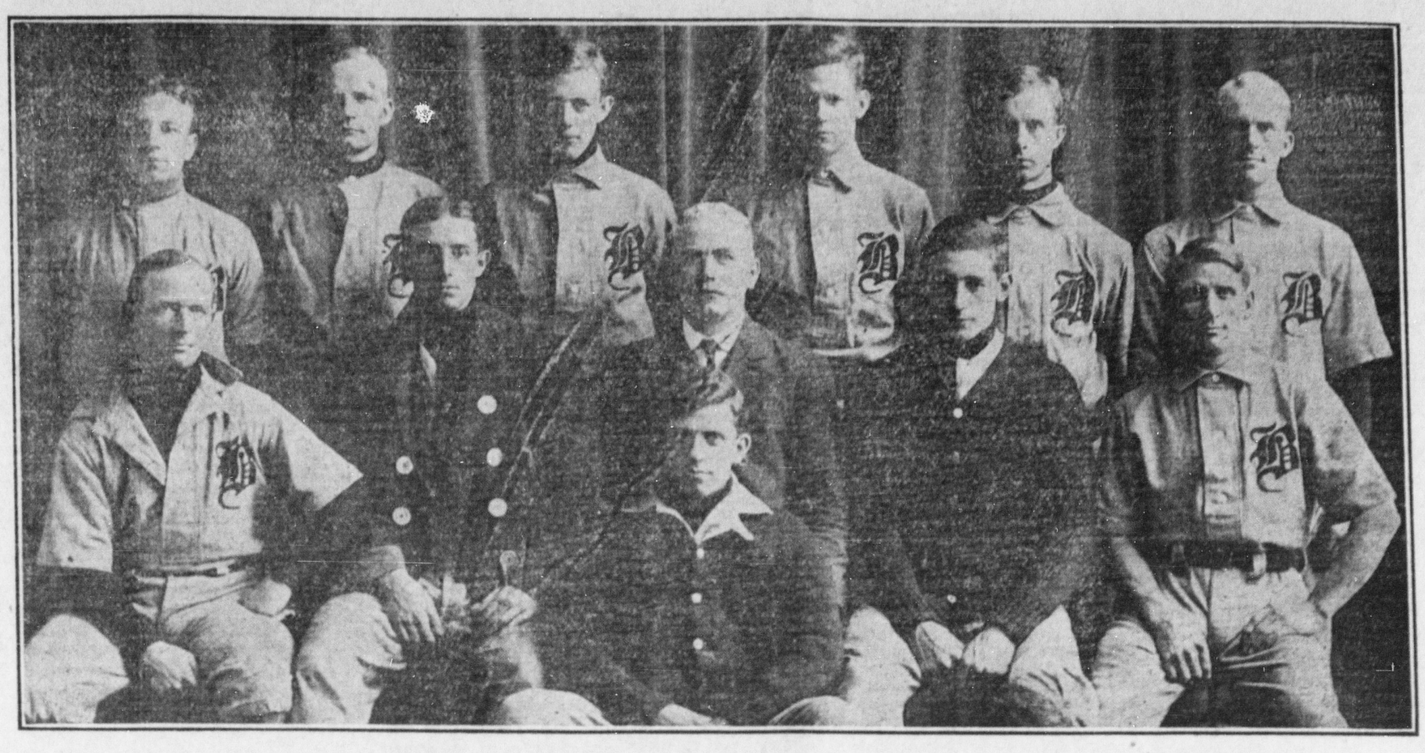
Bellefonte Base Ball Club Which Is Making Brilliant Dash For Central Pennsylvania League Pennant.



BELLEFONTE BASE BALL CLUB.

The winning streak of the Bellefonte boys has been the talk of the Central Penna. League for several days. The home team graced the last place in the list of league teams so long that some persons gave up all hope of even a look-in for the pennant. Then came the wonderful brace in the team. Manager Cunningham took his ball tossers to one side for a heart-to-heart talk. Just what he said isn't necessary for us to repeat here. It is enough to explain that he told the boys that it was up to them to play ball or get out and make room for others who would. It had the desired effect. The boys got down to business and instead of one defeat after another produced a pretty string of victories.

Several local boys are in the Bellefonte team and they have figured conspicuously in the winning of games in the last ten days. Keichline's work at the bat has been a factor, as has also been that of Harry and Maurice Otto. They have been hitting the ball when hits were needed, which explains several victories in close games against the other clubs in the league.

To Martz all credit is due for his work during the entire season. He has been playing a hard, conscientious game all through. His cool, steady work in the box has pulled Bellefonte from out of many a tight hole. That Martz is on the road to a place in one of the major leagues seems certain.

Jacobs has been playing better ball of late than characterized his work earlier in the season. This is especially true of his work at the bat. Bailey, at third, is a fast man and has added the needed strength to that part of the inner field. Kauffman, at first, and Sunday, at second, have been working together better than was the case several weeks ago. Klepfer, one of our new pitchers, has lots of speed and, once he is warmed up, is hard to hit. Spangler and Turner, behind the bat, are putting up a good game. For a time it seemed as if Turner had taken a slump, but of late he has been hitting the ball in good shape.

Here's to Manager Cunningham, the man with a million things to worry him while his pennant chasers are chasing. He has given up more time than any other man in Bellefonte to make the team a winning one. He has gone down into his pocket to a considerable depth to supply missing links at critical periods. He didn't want to become manager but once he did so he buckled down to bring the pennant to Bellefonte. If it doesn't swing this way it won't be his fault.

WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

Two Boys Capture Prizes Offered by Thomson Children.

Benjamin M. Snyder, Jr., of Elmira, N. Y., and Wallace Brockman Porter, of Youngstown, O., were a day or two ago announced as the successful candidates for the Frank Thomson Scholarships. With the addition of these two young men, there will be six holders of these scholarships, which amount to $600 annually, and which are awarded upon a competitive examination, to sons of employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad system.

The successful candidates for the scholarships in 1907 were W. B. Rudd, of Media, Pa., who is now a student at Yale University, and George J. Richers, of Altoona, who is taking a course in engineering at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1908, Merritt E. Gill, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, now at the University of Michigan and Harry Wallis Anderson, of Folcroft, Delaware County, Pa., now at the University of Pennsylvania, were awarded the scholarships.

By securing sixteen points out of a possible sixteen, Wallace Brockman Porter enjoys the distinction of having made the highest mark in his examinations ever made by a candidate for a Thomson scholarship. Young Porter is a son of James Porter, a tallyman in the Freight Station of the Pennsylvania Lines at Youngstown, Ohio. He will be seventeen years old in October, and has just graduated from the Rayen High School, of Youngstown. He has not decided as yet what college he will attend.

Benjamin M. Snyder, Jr., is a son of B. M. Snyder, engineman on the Elmira Division of the Northern Central Railway. He has been attending school at the Starkey Seminary at Lakemont, N. Y. He is nineteen years of age, and expects to enter the University of Pennsylvania at the opening of the college this fall. He will take a course in civil engineering.

The Thomson scholarships were established by Anne Thomson, Frank Graham Thomson, and Clark Thomson, children of the late President Frank Thomson of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The grantors of this trust fund of $120,000.00 declared it was their desire to afford to the sons of living and deceased employes of the Pennsylvania system an opportunity for technical education.

When the awards for 1910 have been made there will be eight beneficiaries of the Thomson Scholarship Fund receiving a college education. This number will be maintained by awarding two scholarships every year.

FOR WEEK END TRIPS.

Little Conveniences That Make Traveling a Pleasure.

At this season of the year, when one is liable to fly off on week end visits at a moment's notice, it is an excellent plan to have a little traveling bag always packed and fitted up for these sudden journeyings. One ingenious girl has just fitted up such a bag at small expense. Instead of buying one already furnished she used a bag she had and fitted it with straps to hold her own toilet silver. She filled tiny bottles with her favorite cologne, face cream and other liquid toilet accessories, each containing only a sufficient amount for the few days she would be away. So compactly did she arrange things that it was simply astonishing how much this small bag held of the indispensables, each neatly and conveniently held in place in its own particular nook.

A woman globe trotter who has reduced the science of packing to a fine art has a novel idea for carrying toilet articles. In the back of one-half of her suit case she has a thin piece of cardboard cut the exact size of the case and neatly covered on one side with brown linen. Attached to this foundation are pockets for holding her different toilet things, such as brush and comb, toothbrush, whisk broom and even a compartment for a pack of cards, all made of the linen. On the largest pockets she has embroidered her monogram, so the contrivance is a thing of beauty as well as a joy to the owner. The cardboard is glued to the back of the case, and it is but the work of an hour to take off the pockets and launder them when necessary. This same woman has also made for herself an apron to be worn to the sleeping car lavatory. It is nothing more than a huckaback towel with a fancy border. One end of the towel is turned up half its depth to form a deep pocket, which in turn is divided into compartments, into which the hairpins, rat, puffs and curls or other hairdressing addenda are safely stowed for transit from sleeping berth to lavatory. The top of the apron is finished with the border as a belt and fastened in the back with wide tape strings.

WHAT ONE GIRL MADE.

An Entirely New Idea That Will Appeal to All Lovers of Sport.

A departure from the common bamboo and bead portiere is one made entirely of exploded rifle shells, and the paradox in the case is that the idea was conceived and executed by a girl.

Her small brother had collected several candy boxes of the little shells—22 caliber "longs and shorts"—and these she skillfully made into a set of portieres for the camp in the Maine woods.

She took a strong needle and a cork and drove the needle through the cork so that the tip of the point protruded and the "eye" end was imbedded in the cork.

It was then a simple matter to make a hole in the shell where the hammer of the gun struck the percussion cap. The needle went throught the metal quickly and easily, the cork keeping it rigid while it was being hammered.

The shells were then strung on heavy linen thread which was waxed. Each thread was shorter than the next, and the graduated effect was very good.

The threads were then secured to a section of bamboo fishing rod and hung over a doorway.

Early Days of the Cookbook.

Of the making of cookbooks there is no end. One of the first was the work of Mrs. Elizabeth Raffald of Manchester, England, who was so much of a business woman that she was more than a century ahead of her time. She published her cookbook under the title "The English Housekeeper" in 1769, and it was so popular that it ran through a second edition the same year. A third edition was in press when Mrs. Raffald sold her rights to a London publisher for $7,000. It was a fortune to her, as she had been working for small wage as a housekeeper, but it turned out to be a poor business stroke, for the book ran through thirty-six editions. Mrs. Raffald, however, was resourceful, for she more than doubled her money by issuing Manchester's first directory in 1772. She got out the directory yearly until her death in 1781. Her cookbook was the first in English, and a second was not issued until several years after her death. Many of her recipes still go into cookbooks without alteration.

A SWEET POT.

One of Grandmother's Customs Much Appreciated Today.

As the summer advances and the fields and gardens grow more glowing and beautiful each day with myriads of sweet smelling blossoms one naturally wonders if there is not some manner in which these treasures of the summer may be preserved to refresh us in the cold, blustering days of December. Our grandmothers utilized these blossoms in many ways. Not only did they sew up the petals of the fragrant rose into pillows and pack them away with salt for their rose jars, but combined with the rose petals they used spices, unguents and flowers of other variety, keeping the mixture carefully conserved in huge jars and conscientiously mixing it with a great wooden spoon at stated intervals. These "sweet pots," as the ladies of the eighteenth century called them, were to be found in every parlor, their fragrance when the lids were removed, as they were when grandmothers gave a tea drinking or some other formal festival, permeating the stately rooms and blending with that of the delicate Formosa which grandmother served in her priceless cups, brought forth for occasions of this kind.

In an old book of recipes, which bears the date of 1802 upon its title page, is found written upon the last page in the delicate, pointed handwriting of the last century the following rule for a sweet pot. It has been experimented with and found to be an everlasting delight to the woman who enjoys the quaint old world atmosphere which the perfume imparts to her drawing room:

"Take of benjamin, storax, myrrh, sweet orifice, zeddary, nutmeg, grains of paradise, cinnamon and cloves half an ounce each. Pound them in a mortar, throw in a handful of bay salt mixed with a little of the spiceries in the bottom of a large jar, then a layer of all kinds of sweet smelling flower leaves, with aromatic plants and herbs cut small. Over each layer of flowers or herbs put a handful of bay salt and some of the spiceries. It requires no more spiceries than directed for the whole of the jar, but more salt must be put between each layer of flowers or leaves, as the flowers must be gathered at different times of the year when in full blossom. Pick clean from stalks and leaves, such as violets, lily of the valley, roses, orange and lemon, clove pinks, gillyflower, lavender and thyme, rose geranium leaves, lemon verbena sweetbrier, bay leaves, marjoram, etc. Keep in close covered jar for a month or two and on first opening stir with a wooden spoon. When wished to have a pleasant odor about your room open the jar and stir again. It improves by keeping."

'Tis swift and bright and chuggy.
But I've no use for any day

DOUBLE CODE CHARGES

Telegraph Companies Established New Rates on Messages.

Joint orders have been issued by the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Companies, which will probably cause a revolution in the sending of code messages by commercial corporations and business firms. The new order places the charge for code or cypher words on a basis of five letters for a word after September 1. In the past the rule has been 10 letters to a word. In other words the cost of messages based on existing codes has been doubled.

In Pittsburgh the change means hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in increased cost for telegraphing by the larger business concerns. That is, it will mean this unless new codes are designed with shorter words which will take the place of the long ones that have been used. The matter has already been discussed by members of the chamber of commerce, and while objection is not so strenuous as might have been expected, the chief complaint is that the telegraph companies have given too short notice of their intention and more time is needed to rearrange codes.

Officials of the telegraph companies said the changes were merely an adjustment of a long-abused method of sending telegrams. Code messages nowadays, they asserted, are the most costly of all telegraphing to the telegraph companies. They are made up of words that mean absolutely nothing to the ordinary man. They are combinations of letters, some words running up into the score or more, and often meaning several complete sentences. Each one these code words has to be sent by an operator, letter by letter, and then repeated back in order that no error is made. When ordinary messages are sent, English words are hurried through by abbreviations and a message of 20 words will not take as long as a single word of code and repeating is unnecessary.

One of the officials of the telegraph companies stated that words like "Ilpofkapay" or "chazabacha" or "benewamvay" take as long to send as a dozen dictionary words, as in these cases, these words have to be spelled out letter by letter, and the mistake of a single letter would change the entire meaning of the message. Now these words will represent two words in cost, while in the past they meant but a single word for charging toll.

Steel and lumber companies and practically all large mercantile houses use codes similar to these. In Pittsburg there are thousands of firms and corporations using these mysterious messages and are affected by the change.

The new order as issued by the telegraph companies starts off with the announcement that "On and after September 1, all groups of letters when such groups do no form dictionary words and are not combinations of dictionary words, will be counted in land-line telegrams at the rate of five letters to the word, with fractions over five letters making a second word. Figures, decimal points and bars of divisions will be counted each separately as one word.

When the code system was in its infancy the simpler forms were used and words were more readily understood by operators and could be more quickly sent. As time developed more intricate combinations, the telegraph companies have been struggling with them and have been finding their transmission more difficult and costly.

In the meantime experts at code and cypher designing will get busy finding a way to shorten up code words and combinations so as to regain some of the lost advantage through this new rate.—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

OUT FOR CONGRESS

Representative Edgar R. Kiess Candidate in Lycoming County District.

That our old and handsome friend, Representative Edgar R. Kiess, of Hughesville, is to be a candidate for Congress in the Lycoming—Clinton—Tioga district is the interesting announcement in the Williamsport "Sun," which says:

Quite the most interesting bit of political gossip that has floated into town in several weeks is the announcement that Hon. Edgar R. Kiess is to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in this district. Mr. Kiess is spending most of his time these days at Eagles Mere, where he is busy with his Forest Inn interests, consequently is not devoting much of his time to making or talking politics. He will neither confirm nor deny the interesting rumor about his reported congressional aspirations, but close friends of his "make no bones" about declaring that when the time comes Mr. Kiess will be in the field and in it to win.

The friends of Mr. Kiess count on a very substantial and potent support coming to him from the fact that he is a close friend of Governor Stuart, and that whatever influence is to be had from that source will accrue to his benefit. There is confessed surprise at the news that Mr. Kiess has ambitions for the congressional nomination, those who oppose him contending that his aspirations might be confined within the state realm of activities. However, now that it seems he is more ambitious than some of his party's leaders supposed, Democrats will be afforded the quite entertaining spectacle of a young—and perhaps some old—Republicans engaging in a scramble for the distinction of being the party candidate for congress.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOUR

Conducted by Grace Livingston Hill Lutz.

Topic: "Why Should War Be Abolished?" Isaiah ii. 2-4: Matthew. v. 38-48.

A speaker at a recent peace conference said:—

"A habit of referring everything to the arbitration of our Heavenly Father is the very best form of government in a home, and in this way peacemakers are trained."

The Bible tells us, and we all profess to believe, that a time is coming in which all the nations of the earth shall bow to one King, the Lord Christ, and that this new kingdom shall be a kingdom of peace, in which all differences shall be settled by the arbitration of our King. We pray for this kingdom to come every day, and we believe most of us that we are helping to bring it by our daily living, yet are we? By our lives many of us show that we think that until that kingdom does come, at least, the way of peace is impossible.

In order to settle any great question like this for the nations one must first settle it for the individual. We must be willing to give up war personally, and to live at peace with all men, and settle everything by arbitration—the arbitration of the Christ who left us this message: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, thou shall love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy, but I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

It was a new doctrine that Jesus taught, and we have not been able fully to accept it yet, even after nearly two thousand years of experience. We still hear Christian fathers teaching their boys to fight for their rights, and those same boys, when they read the twelfth chapter of Romans, say: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." Yes, but it isn't possible! When a fellow picks on you and tries to quarrel, you have to fight him and settle him, or else he'll just keep at it till you do. No, sir! You can't do that in the school yard!" Naturally when that boy grows up he uses the same philosophy with regard to his older enemies, and the new commandment of love to the neighbor and love to the enemy is forgotten—explained away, laid aside—as impossible without at least the arbitration of a living Christ. Perhaps that is the trouble. Christ is not a living Christ to us always, and we forget that we may claim audience with Him at any time and come into close touch with Him and ask what He would have us do.

Often the quarrel, or the bitter feeling laid before Him would take on a new light. His searching eye that knows the heart of man would look straight into the inner recesses of our hearts, revealing to us unsuspected sins where we thought we were wholly in the right. He would say to us, perhaps as he said to the Pharisees: "Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone," and then we should suddenly know that we had a part in the quarrel somewhere. We lost our temper, too, and said the bitter word, gave the disagreeable shrug of the shoulder, the unwarranted curl of the lip, and we have something to repent before we go to war with the one who has annoyed us.

It is always well to consider first in any differece or quarrel, either national or personal, first have we done any wrong ourselves, and usually we shall find something, even if it be but slight. Too many of us, like Peter, unsheath the hasty sword to cut off the ear of the High Priest's servant before we look to the Master's face for the permission to do so.

"For we will not learn the lesson known since ever the years were youug.
That the chief defense which a nation needs is to guard its own hand and tongue."

The story is told how a regiment was once ordered to march into a small town in the Tyrol, and take it. It happened that the place was settled by a colony of Christians. A courier from a neighboring village told them the troops were advancing to take the town. They quietly answered. "If they will take it they must." The soldiers came riding with colors flying and fifes piping defiance, and they looked around for an enemy, but only saw the farmer at his plow, the blacksmith at his anvil and the women at their churns and spinning wheels. Babies crowded around to hear the music and boys ran out to see the soldiers.

"Where are your soldiers?" they asked.

"We have none," was the brief reply. "But we have come to take the town."

"Well," said the citizens, "friends, it lies befroe you."

"But is there here nobody to fight?"

"No," they answered, "we are all Christians!"

The commander was perplexed. He did not know what to do with the situation. It was a new kind of resistance, and one against which bullets were useless.

"It is impossible to take such a town as this," he said, and ordered his horses' heads to be turned about and thus they departed without harming anyone.

That is what Jesus would have His followers do, for He has given us this word: "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, vengeance is mine, I will repay," and we can safely trust Him to guard and avenge His own. During the awful revolutions in the days of Imperial Rome, Julius Atticus, an officer of the guard, rushed into Galba's presence with a bloody sword, boasting that he had slain Galba's rival, Otho. Galba's response was "My comrade, by whose order?" Perhaps we shall one day be asked that as we stand before our King and confess to having returned evil for evil to some other one of those for whom Christ died.

"What are you thinking, my man?" asked Lord Hill of a soldier who was leaning upon his fire-lock looking gloomily around him on the thousands of French and English slain, just after the battle of Salamanca had been won by the English. The soldier started and saluted:-

"I was thinking, my lord, how many widows and orphans I have this day made tor one shilling."

There is always the other side to be considered in any kind of a war.

A few years ago Chile and Argentina, separated by the Andes Mountains, were disputing over the boundary line which had never been determined. The two countries became very much aroused and began to build warships, collect weapons and prepare for war. But a few peace-loving people in each nation persuaded the Government to settle the matter by arbitration. With the aid of the King of England this was done and that it might never be forgotten a beautiful statute of Christ as the peace-maker, was cast from the metal of old cannon and set upon the summit of the mountains where Chile and Argentina meet. On the base of the statue runs this inscription:-

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than Argentina and Chileans break the peace which they have sworn to maintain."—Philadelphia Press.

Odd Fellows' Picnic.

The committee of arrangements have provided an excellent program for the I. O. O. F.. picnic, to be held at Hunter's Park, September 6, Labor Day.

There will be two games of base ball; one between the Bellefonte and State College Odd Fellows', the other between the Rebekahs, of the same lodges.

Suitable prizes have been procured for the following contests: fat woman's race, nail driving contest, shoe lacing contest, candle race, fat man's race, lemon race, hop race, egg race, block race, ball throwing contest, peanut roll and a bean bag contest.

Among the most interesting features of the day will be a baby show. Every visitor will be allowed to cast a vote for his favorite baby. A very pretty wicker chair will be presented to the child receiving the most votes.

A cash prize of $3 will be given to the man with the largest family on the grounds. There will be dancing in the pavilion all day, an excellent orchestra having been provided for the occasion.

There will be several special trains over the Bellefonte Central, and low excursion rates have been provided. Aside from the regular schedule special trains will leave Bellefonte at 8.50 a. m. and 12.50 p. m.

The last train for Bellefonte, will leave the Park at 8.30 p. m.

One train will feave Pine Grove Mills at 7.35 a. m. and State College at 8.00 a. m.

State's Foot Ball Prospects.

In an interview, with a representative of the "Republican," W. N. Golden, chief athletic instructor at State College, said in regard to State's foot ball prospects for the coming season: State's team will be greater than ever. Practically the whole of last year's team will be back. Hirshman, McCleary, Vorhees, Moser, Herman, Piolett and Dick. Smith will report for practice several weeks before school begins. Ciphers, last year's crack guard, will be the one vacancy that must be developed. From all indications there will be some fast class teams. State will play Pennsylvania, Lafayette, Carlisle Indians, Gettysburg, Western University of Pennsylvania and many smaller schools. It has been deemed best to cut out the games with Annapolis and Cornell. At present everything points to a banner year."

PICNIC BIG SUCCESS

Great Crowd at Outing of Centre--Clinton Business Men, at Hecla.

With the weather man going the limit in giving a splendid day for the occasion the Centre—Clinton county business men's picnic, at Hecla Park, on Tuesday, was a success in every way, the attendance breaking all records.

From early in the morning until the last train for home the park was crowded with a good-natured, happy throng, which was made up of business men and farmers and their wives from the two counties, with quite a few visitors from Lycoming county. To keep up his end the weather man simply had to furnish the nicest kind of a day, and this made the program all that could be desired.

All business places in Bellefonte and Lock Hayen were closed for the day, in keeping with the custom established when this annual gathering of the representatives of the two counties was inaugurated. While the attendance at the park was remarkably large the best of order prevailed throughout the day and everybody had the best kind of a time. Hundreds of families had basket picnics, while others secured their meals on the grounds. Hecla Park never showed up to better advantage, maintaining its reputation of being one of the most desirable picnic grounds in Pennsylvania.

While the base ball game between Bellefonte and Lock Haven was the biggest card of the day, there were numerous other features to help make the occasion interesting for all. The Repasz band, of Williamsport, furnished music which was of the finest, while Christy Smith's orchestra made dancing in the pavilion a treat enjoyed by many during the afternoon and evening.

The base ball game was won by Bellefonte, after nine exciting innings. The score was 1--0. It was an exhibition game and while the result in no way affects the standing of the four clubs in the Central Pennsylvania League a large crowd turned out to see the clash of the two closely matched teams. Bellefonte tried out Moore, a new pitcher, and he "made good." Lock Haven used two pitchers, Peck and Newton, but Bellefonte was able to maintain the lead secured before Newton replaced Peck. Each team had many rooters along the side lines, and the excitement was kept at a high pitch until the end. The game afforded many Bellefonte persons an opportunity to get a line on the two teams since they have been strengthened by the signing of new players.

The several races resulted as follows:

Greased pig race--won by David Stewart. Prize, a $5 pig.

Relay race--won by Bellefonte; Hartranft, Levi, R. Hollobaugh and Morgan. Each received a gold medal.

100 yard dash--won by James E. Robinson, of Lock Haven. Prize, watch fob.

Peanut relay race--won by Marshall Cook, of Bellefonte. Prize, signet ring.

Watermelon contest--won by T. Bathurst, of Bellefonte. Prize $2.

Greased pole race--no one able to climb the pole.

Shooting contest--won by Clinton county team, 110 to 105, over the Centre county team. The individual scores follow: Clinton county--Jobson 24 out of 25; Monroe, 24; Pardee, 22; Furst, 21; Anderson, 19. Total, 110. Centre county--Chambers, 23; Quigley, 22; Uzzle, 21; Watson, 21; Hinds, 18. Total, 105.

New Rugs From Old Carpets.

"In almost every home there are usually to be found some carpets that because of either shabbiness or extreme ugliness have been banished to the attic," says the Woman's Home Companion" for September. "These can be turned into a most attractive kind of rug. The carpets are sent to the maker, who has them cleaned and raveled and then woven into a soft, fluffy surface of nondescript tone, with a border of contrasting color. These 'fluff rugs' are among the best of the cheap rugs and do not look cheap at all, and it is a pleasant surprise to see how many useful and charming rugs can be made from a seemingly hopeless old carpet. To have them made costs about one dollar a square yard, making the twelve-by-nine size cost twelve dollars. The maker usually pays express charges one way."

Where He Blundered.

A Cleveland lawyer tells a story about a Milesian wielder of the pick who had been digging a trench for a gas pipe leading to a private residence—a one inch pipe.

Contemplating the excavation and comparing its capacity with the loose dirt, he shook his head in doubt. "Be this and be that," said he, "I'm thinking I'll not have room in the ditch for all the dirrt on the pile, bad cess."

"But," said a bystander, "why not, Pat?"

"Sure," he made reply, "because I didn't dig it deep enough!"—Cleveland News.

A Growing Love.

Mr. and Mrs. Married Bliss were both growing very plump, and every effort to reduce weight had proved fruitless, and their discontent with their failure was pathetic.

"It is too bad," said a mutual friend to a sympathetic physician. "The Blisses are so fond of each other and used to be so graceful and slender when they were first married."

"Ah, well!" replied the physician. "Think how much more they are to each other now."—Life.

The Wars of Our Country

XXVIII.—War For Texas Independence

By Albert Payson Terhune

An army of 4,000 Mexicans surrounded an old mission fort near San Antonio, Tex., seeking vainly for an undefended spot to attack. Their cannon pounded the ancient walls, and their sharpshooters lay in wait for sight of any defender who might recklessly expose himself to the endless fusillade. Within the fort were about 140 American men and perhaps forty women and children. One of the most sensational dramas in American history was being enacted.

Here are the events that led to it.

Texas was part of the republic of Mexico, but as time went on thousands of American farmers, cattlemen, pioneers, hunters, etc., were lured by the richness and promise of the land to cross the frontier and settle within its borders.

The latter, for the most part, refused to become Mexican citizens or in any way to help the country of their adoption. Soon they went even further. Not liking the idea of becoming part and parcel of so weak and degenerate a land as Mexico, these Americans decided to rebel and make Texas an independent nation under their own rule.

A convention of American settlers was called on April 1, 1833, and a constitution adopted. Samuel Houston, foremost man of all the delegates, urged that they were not yet strong enough to frame a declaration of independence and for the time prevented such a step. He set to work forming an army out of the widely scattered population and preparing for the struggle that was bound to come. Mexico, finding that all peaceful means failed, resolved to crush the rebellion by force of arms. General Santa Anna, with a Mexican army 5,000 strong, marched into Texas early in 1836. News of his coming stirred the settlers to activity and quick defense. At New Washington March 2, 1836, a declaration of independence was adopted, and Houston was chosen commander in chief.

Meantime Santa Anna and 4,000 troops advanced on San Antonio. The old Alamo mission there had been turned into a fort and was defended by Colonel William Travis and about 140 frontiersmen. The wives and children of neighboring settlers had also flocked thither for protection.

On Feb. 23, 1836, Santa Anna surrounded the fort and began his cannonade, trying to break down the walls or to hammer a breach in one of them wide enough for an attacking force to charge through. For ten days the bombardment continued. The garrison was so small that nearly every man was kept on duty day and night. News of their plight reached the more distant settlements. A handful of brave backwoodsmen, led by Colonel Bowie (for whom the bowie knife was named) and by the famous Davy Crockett, cut their way through the Mexican army, and thirty-two of them succeeded in reaching the fort.

"We've come to die with you!" shouted Crockett as Travis welcomed the pitiably small reinforcement.

FIGHTING FOR INDEPENDENCE.

Every one realized the defense could have but one end. Yet none would yield. They knew what mercy they might expect from Santa Anna. At last, on March 6, the cannon tore a breach in the walls and the Mexicans rushed in. Worn out as they were with fatigue, starvation and constant fighting, the Americans twice drove back their assailants, with heavy losses. But at the third charge the Mexicans, by sheer weight of numbers, gained a foothold inside the inclosure. There was no surrender. All fell fighting, except five, who were overpowered and captured. These were butchered by Santa Anna in cold blood.

From the Alamo Santa Anna passed on to Goliad, where 500 Americans were killed after a desperate defense of the place. But the news of these catastrophes lashed every American in Texas to a mania of vengeance. On April 21 Houston so maneuvered his army of 750 as to bring it into action against the main division of the Mexican army, 1,800 strong, on the banks of the San Jacinto river. The Americans rushed into battle shouting, "Remember the Alamo!" In less than an hour the Mexicans were utterly routed. Santa Anna was taken prisoner and Houston had difficulty in restraining the victors from tearing the barbarous general to pieces. This battle was the last blow of the war.

Houston became the first president of the republic of Texas. He brought the new republic into the United States. Texas entered the Union, Dec. 29, 1845, almost on the eve of a far greater and more important war with Mexico—a war between the latter nation and our own government.

PROFIT IN TREE FARMING.

Government Advice Which Will Help Owners of Forest Lands.

Unused lands in any part of the United States can be made to produce from $6 to $20 an acre, according to a recent forestry report by the government.

In the report the interests of the country in general are considered, and in this light tree growers are advised to keep their trees uncut until they are of mature size. "Plantations of red cedar twenty-five years old," says one report, "have netted $200.54 an acre. European larch, used for telephone or fence posts, will net from $200 to $225 an acre at the age of twenty-five years. White pine at the ripe age of forty years will produce $300 an acre as uncut timber," while other woods more than twenty years of age bring prices that compare favorably with these.

But to the man who is expecting that in ten or fifteen years his tree crop will reach a salable value the figures of the national forest service are a bit out of reach. Yet to that individual hope is offered in the announcement that there are uses and even good prices paid for trees which range from the tender age of six years up and that the demand for these slender striplings is growing greater each year.

An example of this lies in the match industry alone. This line of manufacture has nearly all been merged into a great trust which annually purchases at a good figure thousands of acres of white pine trees anywhere from Maine to California. It buys these as uncut timber in size from six inches up and after clearing the tract moves on to its next forest. In the manufacture of barrel staves and hoops trees of almost any tough, flexible wood are used from the ages of four to fifteen years, while any straight young trees of ten years will make salable flag or tent poles.

Young alders, poplars and willows of from ten to fifteen years serve mankind in the manufacture of gunpowder, while the prolific beech and maple, from six inches in diameter upward, can be used in the manufacture of wood alcohol, for which there is an enormously increasing demand all over the country. Furniture manufacturers, always on the outlook for wood with a fine grain, will take birch, cherry, walnut, etc., not large enough to be used in making parts of house furnishings for use as veneer. Never before in the history of the United States has so much wood been used in the manufacture of ornaments and toys as is now being used for that purpose, and thousands of feet of spruce are employed by manufacturers of sleighs and wagons.

In some parts of New York and Pennsylvania large quantities of small timber are used in wood distillation plants for the production of acid, while all over the country small timber is used for the manufacture of charcoal. Small sizes of timber, particularly the spruce of New England, is used in the pulp mills where paper and other wood pulp products are manufactured. Then, again, many small trees are bought for the manufacture of toothpicks, while in the mining country of Pennsylvania and other coal producing states thousands of "sprags" are purchased to serve their peculiar purpose. This is to check the speed of the mule carts as they go rapidly down the steep grade of the mines by being thrown beneath the wheels.

These are only a few of the hundreds of uses to which young timber may be put if it is near enough to a market to be sold.

Prairies of a New Country.

By way of contrast in a new country we give a picture showing the breaking up of virgin soil at Cordova, South America. A large part of the Argentine Republic, including practically the whole of the rich and fertile provinces of Cordova, San Luis and Santa Fe, is in its virgin state of little use for grazing, being sparsely covered with coarse, bitter grasses of but little nutriment. These lands, although having such a poor natural covering, require only the hand of man to turn them into the finest pasturage in the world. Often as many as ten three-furrow disk plows may be seen following one another up and down, breaking up the land preparatory to sowing alfalfa (lucern). The plows, as shown in the picture, are drawn by eight criollo (native) horses tied four abreast, the plowman riding the near wheeler. With two changes of horses one plow will break up as much as five acres of virgin soil a day. Some ranchers sow with lucern 5,000 acres a year. This in its virgin state would carry some 250 head of cattle, but once down in lucern would support 2,000 head.

Remedy For Plant Lice.

One of the best methods of destroying plant lice on roses and shrubs is by the use of tobacco stem solution. Pour a gallon of boiling water on a pound of tobacco stems and about twelve or fifteen hours later add four more gallons of water. Apply with a sprayer or sprinkling pot.

The Curl In the Pig's Tail.

The curl in a pig's tail is an indication of good health. When the curl begins to straighten out look for disease and give medicine or a change of feed.

CATARRHAL DISEASES OF SUMMER TIME.

Most people think that catarrh does not prevail in the summer time. Catarrh is generally regarded as a winter disease.

It certainly is true that catarrh of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs is more prevalent during the winter time. But it is also true that catarrh of the stomach, bowels and kidneys is more prevalent during the summer time. Thus we have catarrhal diseases of summer, and catarrhal diseases of winter.

It is probably true that the mortality from catarrhal diseases is greater in the winter time than in the summer. But yet there is an alarming number of people who die annually from those catarrhal affections that are peculiar to summer.

Catarrh is a chronic congested inflammation of a mucous membrane. The mucous membrane of the stomach is just as liable to catarrh as the mucous membrane of the throat, the lungs, the bronchial tubes. Catarrh of the stomach is the same kind of a disease as catarrh of the throat and lungs. So, also, is catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh of the kidneys. Catarrh of all the other internal organs.

Catarrhal diseases peculiar to summer are, catarrh of the stomach, sometimes called gastritis; catarrh of the small intestines, sometimes called enteritis; catarrh of the colon, sometimes called colitis. These diseases are very prevalent during the summer, especially if the air be hot and humid.

We regard Peruna as an excellent remedy for these forms of internal catarrh. Dr. Hartman's practice, which covered a period of many years, in which he used chiefly Peruna for all bowel diseases, is confirmatory of this fact, from the standpoint of a professional test.

The multitude of letters that we receive from all parts of the United States, in which the effect of Peruna is described upon catarrhal affections of the internal organs, would make it appear that Peruna is certainly one of the greatest remedies for this class of diseases, if not indeed the very greatest.

In colic and cramps, attacks of indigestion, distention of the bowels by gas, diarrhea, constipation, Peruna is relied upon by thousands of people and its use as a household remedy gains a stronger hold upon the people as time goes on.

Howard.

Our school board is winning for itself the distinction of dispatching business with the sagacity of the Czar of Russia, who, when the Douma refused to conform to his peculiar ideas, promptly dissolved that body. When the teachers were elected some contended that normal graduates should be given the preference, while others insited on home teachers so far as practicable, and as a result the former corps of teachers was re-elected, which was well and good for they all were tried and true. Later the question of changing books came before the board and the members were so eagerly besieged and harrangued by the book agents that on the night of meeting they settled the whole matter by adopting a resolution to change no books and dismissed the agents much to their dismay. Next they concluded that the rooms and hall of the building needed repapering and asked for bids for the same. When the bids were opened there seemed to be some dissatisfaction about awarding the contract and the question was settled by deciding not to make this much needed improvement this Fall. Thus the board is becoming expert in evading the questions at hand, but so far nothing has been done that will in any way retard the progress of the schools.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE very minute we have a case we see that it is different from all others and that no rules apply.

Serenity is the consolation a man has for having reached the condition of indifference.

But, then, a perfectly wise man wouldn't fit conditions, and he would have a most wretched time of it.

There are abundant reasons why all of us should do as we ought, but some of us aren't on speaking terms with them.

It is hard to convince a man that he is it when a bigger man is sitting on him.

Maybe we can't discover the north pole because some Norseman of long ago found it and used it for fuel.

There are people who are nothing if not spectacular, and rarely that.

The canning season being at hand, general nuisances should walk circumspectly.

Why it should be necessary to be uncomfortable in order to be comfortable is one of the inexplicable things.

People usually like to be on the ground when their special form of amusement is going on, but dynamiters are the exception.

No Bond of Sympathy.

An earthquake I have never met
While strolling down the pike,
Nor am I curious a bit
To know what they are like.
I wouldn't care to call one down
Or try its wrath to stem.
If they will just let me alone
I'll do as much for them.

Some foolish people might desire
An earthquake for a pet,
But that would not appear to me
To be the one best bet.
I'd rather have a poodle dog
To follow me around
Than have the very finest quake
That ever shook the ground.

An earthquake is so very rude;
Ill mannered is no name
For all the capers that it cuts
In working out its game.
When it has in a reckless mood
Mussed up some special spot
The owner of the place observes
His house won't fit his lot.

Experience is very fine—
It helps a man along—
But I will pass the earthquake up
And take some not so strong.
If in advance I can but know
Where it will run amuck
I'll take my family and my grip
And make a graceful duck.

No Visible Supply.

"Do you question my sanity?"

"Well, I might under some circumstances."

"What circumstances?"

"If I were ever to see enough of it to point a question at."

Caustic.

"They say she married a poor man."

"I can well understand that."

"Why?"

"Anybody would feel like exclaiming 'Poor man!' when speaking of the man she married."

Answered.

What statesman large would truckle
Or list to a suggestion
From common people coming?
That low, suggestive chuckle
Is answer to the question,
The situation summing.

Had It In For Him.

"Why don't you write a novel?"

"A novel?"

"Sure?"

"What for?"

"The critics."

"She must have taken treatment."

"No; her father struck oil."

"Don't be frightened. My finger wasn't near the trigger."

At the Bargain Sale.

"See," said his wife proudly; "I saved 39 cents by coming here today."

"Yes," growled her husband, "and I lost $5 worth of time coming with you."

Just Noises.

"Look here!" shouted the irate farmer. "What are yeou doing fishing in my lake when it's posted?"

"Aw, go on!" sneered the tough city lad. "Make a noise like a hoop and roll away."

The farmer took out his knife and cut off a section of birch.

"Sonny," he said solemnly, "I reckon yeou'd be better making a noise like a locomotive for the next few minutes."

"Like a locomotive, old clover seed! Why?"

"Because yeou are going to be switched."

And the next moment the yells that emanated from the clump of bushes made a noise like a Sioux Indian on the warpath.—Chicago News.

Explained.

Aunt Carrie's mocking bird's a peach except that he won't sing.
We've tried him since he came, and he will eat most anything.
We've fed him soap and camphor balls and pie and pumpkin seeds,
But still he just won't sing, because he don't get what he needs.

We fed him tacks and broken glass and snuff and turpentine,
And when he ate blue paint he chirped and sure was doing fine,
But he was such a lazy bird he wouldn't eat no more,
And now he's lying in his cage, all spread out on the floor.
So when Aunt Carrie comes she'll have to ask—that crazy thing—
We wouldn't tell her for the world—the reason he won't sing.
—Galveston News.

"I Told You So."

An old couple lived in the mountains of eastern Tennessee. He was ninety-five and she ninety. Their son, a man of seventy, died. As the old folks crossed the pasture to their cabin after the burial the woman noticed a tear roll down her husband's cheek. She patted him tenderly on the arm and said:

"Never mind, John; never mind. You know I always said we never would raise that boy."—Success.

I hired her, forsooth, to dictate to her.

I made her a partner and mate to me
She lifted her eyes from the keys and the pen
And started right in to dictate to me!

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Headache?

If it does, you should try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Why not do so. They will relieve the pain in just a few minutes. Ask your druggist There are 45,000 druggists in the U. S. Ask any of them. A package of 25 doses costs 25 cents. One tablet usually stops a headache. They relieve pain without leaving any disagreeable after-effects—isn't that what you want?

"My son Frank Snyder has used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a long time. He never had anything to help him so much for headache. A year ago he came home, and I was down sick with such a dreadful nervous headache. He gave me one of the Anti-Pain Pills, and after while I took another and was entirely relieved. I always keep them in the house now, and gave many away to others suffering with headache."

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Brights or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

VACATION WORK.

Dainty Things That Can Be Made With the Needle.

MODISH HANDMADE STOCKS.

Coat Sets Decidedly Smart Accessories to Add to the Summer Wardrobe. Black and White Effects Always Good Style—A Tucked Blouse.

Vacation time never spells idleness for the average woman. She may rest from her usual occupation, but if she is like most women her hands cannot lie idle in her lap. Vacation means only time to do something different, something that she hasn't had time to do through the year. That is why, for every one but the woman who uses her needle in her profession, needlework is particularly popular in the summer months. Every woman likes to make dainty things with her needle, but the business woman and the teacher seldom find time throughout the year for any but the most necessary sort of sewing. A button here or a skirt braid there and a few holes mended is the extent of her efforts in this direction.

But with the long summer afternoons of vacation time the busy woman finds time for many a bit of fine sewing.

Neckwear is always well worth the efforts of the needle worker.

The girl with a long, slender neck finds difficulty in finding just the right sort of stocks in the shops. They are too large around and not high enough. A good design for such a stock shows the neck part made of fine batiste in hand run tucks. It is trimmed with narrow bands of Irish insertion, which is laid around the top of the stock until it reaches the front, where it is curved downward to the bottom. A touch of band embroidery is added to the V shaped opening of the tucked batiste which shows in the front, and the whole is edged with narrow Irish crochet. The plaited jabot attached to the stock is of fine net.

For some decidedly smart accessories to add to her summer wardrobe a girl would do well to make herself a black and white coat set. Such a set is especially effective with a suit or dress of the black and white shepherd's plaid which is now so smart. The Dutch collar and turnback cuffs are made of heavy white linen, embroidered in black coin dots. A little jabot of the same is worn with the collar, and the whole set is edged with finely gathered lace or plaitings of fine mull.

After studying all the elaborate blouse models shown in the shops the woman of taste is apt to revert to the simple style of fine tucks and a sparing use of good lace or embroidery insertion. A dainty blouse for summer could be made of fine white batiste, with hand run tucks, forming a yoke, and a row of insertion on either side running from the shoulder to the waist.

Laundry Convenience.

A woman who is doing over her house and adding a new laundry has hit upon a plan for indoor drying that will mean less terror on rainy wash days.

Around two sides of her laundry she has run a shelf about six or eight inches wide at the height of a low plate rail. Under this shelf are hooks, any number of them, on which the clothes can be hung when they cannot go on the lines out of doors.

The shelves are convenient places to stow irons, pots and pans that are not in everyday use, boxes of soap and all the other odds and ends that are so cluttery in a closet.

There are few sorrows that a salad cannot solace, and the woes are not many which will not vanish, at least temporarily, before a carefully chosen dessert. The "food cure" is the best in the world for moods.

THE USE OF ROUGE.

The Cheap Variety Should Never Be Bought.

Skin specialists, and surely these people ought to be authorities on the subject, claim that the use of rouges and paints can only injure the skin. Many of the rouges on the market merely fill up the pores and give the face a pasty look. Many are the serious cases of skin disease that have resulted from using rouge. Although the use of rouge is never to be recommended, there are certain times when its use might be said to be permissible. No woman ever should make it a practice to use rouge regularly, for it will not be long before her skin is coarse in texture and the pores are open and coarse. On occasions, however, a little rouge may be used on the face, but it must be applied carefully.

The art in applying rouge to the face is to put it on to look like the best imitation possible of nature and not to plaster it on until there is no mistaking what it is. It is best never to use liquid rouge, for it is almost impossible to apply this successfully, and in any case the only time it should be used is at night. The least harmless of rouges are those that come in the form of grease. Rouge that comes as a powder also is injurious to the skin.

As in the case of all cosmetics, cheap rouge should never be bought. If you must use rouge, use that which is prepared by some reliable house. Women do not seem to realize that nature is wiser than we are and that if our skin naturally is delicate and white it mars the beauty of it to try to make it red.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Lady Laurier, in speaking of the women of Canada recently, said that it still is fashionable there, "be you rich or poor, plain or aristocratic, to be known in your community as a fine housekeeper."

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth was one of the first women in the country to wear a "rat," and it is said she wore the biggest ones too. The fact that she no longer wears a pompadour, but dresses her hair in the simplest fashion, is proof positive of the fact that this is now the style.

The smart houses of London now have waitresses and parlor maids where manservants were once in demand. It is found that the women are much more ornamental in their black frocks and white aprons and caps. The caterers supply them, and it looks more like the servants of the house when the retinue appears. The women do the work as well, if not better, and the caterers find they are more likely to be permanent and can be depended upon.

Miss Lillian Roff is the first woman to take the degree of bachelor of divinity in the London university. She entered for the examination against the wishes of many members of the faculty, as only a few women have ever desired the degree. Miss Roff, however, persisted in going in for the distinction. The examination is unusually rigid. Miss Roff was the only woman in fifty taking the examination, and she came out with the highest percentage.

At St. Pancras, in England, there is a school where fathers are taught to take care of the house and the children in anticipation of the time when women go out to do the work and men must sit at home and mind the house. There used to be a time when a man out of a job would have to let his wife go out and do washing or cleaning and when she came home at night she would have to get her own house in order. Now the men will be expected to do that for their wives. The course in housekeeping will also be of benefit to men whose wives are sick or absent.

Mrs. Robley D. Evans, wife of "Fighting Bob," lets in a curious little beam of sidelight on American naval history in a story to one of her friends in Washington, telling how it came to pass the wives of officers were barred from accompanying them on warships. When she was young, Mrs. Evans says, a defeated South American revolutionist sneaked aboard an American battleship when it was in one of the tropical ports on a neutral mission. Making his way to the wife of the commander, he told such a tale of his wrongs that she consented to hide him in the ship's hold. It was not until he was many miles out at sea that the commander learned the revolutionist was stowed aboard, in violation, of course, of international law. There was a mighty outcry, Mrs. Evans says, when the facts reached Washington. The authorities then made the rule banishing women from warships.

A Good Poultice.

A good poultice that gives relief in many kinds of sudden pain is one well known to our grandmothers, but now little used because few know how to make it. It is made from dried hops. Put a cupful of the hops in a cup of hot water and let it boil until the water is reduced to half a cup, then stir in enough cornmeal to thicken.

Apply very hot between thin muslin cloths. Poultices when needed at night can be made on an alcohol lamp with a tin cup on top. A new poultice can be heated in this while the old one is cooling on the patient. It saves many trips to the kitchen.

A Laundry Hint.

Did you ever try leaving eiderdown baby blankets or wrappers out of doors on the grass in a driving rain? Turn from time to time until it gets clean without getting lumpy.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

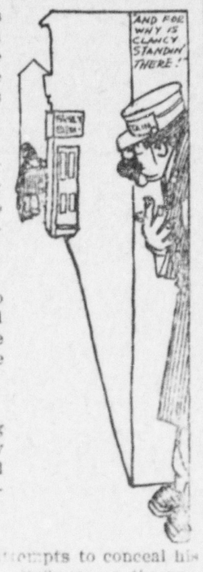
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

BUT the trouble is that silence and passivity are invariably translated as indorsement.

A big gun is a sight for the police when he is loaded.

Undoubtedly some of us are innocent bystanders when the other fellows are out working for our benefit.

It requires lots more faith than some of us have to think we are getting what is coming to us.



The tale that wags the dog has something to do with a toothsome bone.

The man who is well endowed with nerve hasn't much use for industry.

In these flying days not every one is an angel who is sprouting wings.

When a man attempts to conceal his purposes, he doesn't figure on the suspicion of others.

Reading maketh a full man. Put your tramp friend on.

Trouble was born twins.

Speculation.

I wonder idly when and where
My purchases would end
If I had in my pocket all
The money I could spend.
I think I'd travel round a bit
And look at all the sights,
And to supply my wants the stores
Would have to open nights.

What would or wouldn't I procure
To wear and drink and eat
In luxuries and all the things
That make the life complete?
When I in spending right and left
Got action on the works
The places where the goods were sold
Would put on extra clerks.

I'd buy enough to load a dray
Or start a candy store.
And after I had rested up
I'd go and buy some more.
Most any ancient thing in stock
On me they could unload.
And when the clerk had wrapped it up
I'd tote it down the road.

Oh, life would be a busy dream
Of buying on the run,
Of getting everything that made
For comfort or for fun!
But as I find on feeling deep
I'm very nearly broke
I think I'll hunt a corner store
And buy a five cent smoke.

The Aftermath.

"Talking of that banquet last night," said Holmes, "I suppose you heard some fine language."

"Yes," replied Booze; "I heard some fine language this morning that affected me very much.

"This morning?"

"Yes. It was, 'Ten dollars and costs.'"

The Most Modern.

He had just arrived from college
With a ton of useful knowledge,
He could talk in Greek and Latin,
Out of French could take a fall,
Juggle German for a minute,
But he found he wasn't in it
Nor at home with his companions
Till he learned to talk baseball.

Unwritten Messages.

"Where are those young men going? I see them pass every day about this time."

"Just down to the postoffice."

"After mail, I suppose."

"No; they don't get mail. It is a female attraction."

Mean.

"Why are all the women crazy over that man?"

"Don't you know?"

"No, I don't."

"Because he has such a leftover appearance that they think he must be a bargain."

Protecting Both.

"Close the door, Willie."

"What for?"

"Close the door quick and don't ask any questions. Don't you see that your father is going to shave and the minister is in the house?"

Modifier.

To those who have a yellow streak
We turn a shoulder cold
Unless, indeed, we chance to know
That streak is made of gold.

Almost the Same.

"Did you ever see a catboat?" asked the amateur sailor, trying to impress the awed landlubber.

"No, I can't say that I ever did," replied the landsman, "but I am familiar with a dog bark."

His Opinion.

"Aren't the mosquitoes just terrible?"

"Are they gathering about you?"

"Awfully."

"Well, they certainly show good taste."

She Did.

"Will you be quiet?"

"Why should I?"

"Then you might hear what they are saying about you."

TRAVELING COOKING SCHOOLS

Germany Reaches Rural Districts In Most Effective Way.

The teaching of cooking in Germany is carried on with German thoroughness. Not content with establishing rural schools where farmers' daughters might learn the domestic arts, Germany has now instituted traveling schools. It was found that the rural schools did not meet the needs of the whole rural population. The bulk of this population is made up of small farmers, and in such homes the help of the daughters is needed so constantly that they cannot be sent away from home to school. Neither can the money be provided for their expenses, and many farmers are afraid, too, that after their daughters have been away to school they will not be willing to return to the simple conditions of the farm.

Since the people will not go to the schools, therefore the schools are being sent to the people. Baden took the lead in the establishment of traveling schools of cooking and sewing, and the idea is spreading rapidly. Hesse, Nassau, Franconia, the Palatinate, all have their traveling cooking schools or have begun to establish them. The Bavarian Farmers' association has established two such schools and selected two nuns as teachers. The association pays the teachers and most of the other expenses, so that the cost to the pupils is very small. In some cases the township or village pays all or part of the expense of pupils who could not otherwise afford to attend the school.

It has been found that the traveling school has many advantages in addition to its accessibility. The teaching can be adapted to local conditions, and the pupils can at once put into practice what they have learned. Furthermore, the teacher can visit the homes of the pupils and see that they really understand what has been taught.

SPLINT FURNITURE.

Gives an Unconventional Woodsy Appearance to Bungalow.

Indian splint furniture is the latest fad for the summer bungalow. This furniture, despite its somewhat bulky and rude appearance, is by no means inexpensive, for the splint chair backs and seats are mounted in frames of weathered oak, and strips of galvanized steel cleverly woven through the splints makes the furniture very durable and solid. To match these big, smart looking chairs and low seats there are splint topped tables and footstools and splint woven scrap baskets, and the very up to date bungalow will have splint paneled walls divided off by uprights of weathered oak. A room of this sort, recently designed by a clever woman decorator, suggested the woodsy appearance of a mountain interior. There were hangings of coarse canvas run with colored leather thongs and edged with colored bead fringe. Bits of dull colored Indian pottery stood about, and even the lamp shade was unconventional, being made of raffia strips in an open pattern over a Japanese rice paper lining.

A High Priced Orchid.

An orchid this of high degree. It is an odontoglossum, which was exhibited at the London flower show and which was there sold for $4,000.

Making a Rare Lettuce.

Mrs. Francis G. Newlands, niece of Ward McAllister and wife of the Nevada senator, has succeeded in growing a rare lettuce in the garden of her country home near Washington. The lettuce is very bitter, and as a salad it is a delicacy to the cultivated taste. Mrs. Newlands imported the seed from Italy, and she is one of the first to grow this variety in America. The Newlands occupy the estate which formerly was the home of John R. McLean and later was owned by Admiral Dewey. Mrs. Newlands personally directs all work in the extensive garden. Here she grows a large variety of herbs. She has cut the garden in two with a low wall of loose stones, which now is covered with vines of wild roses, honeysuckle and ivy.

As Clear as Crystal.

An English firm whose shipment of goods was delayed in reaching Japan received the following communication from its newly appointed Japanese agent: "With regard to the matter of escaping the penalty for nondelivery of this—there is only one way to creep round same—by diplomat. We must make a stir or strike occurring in our factory. Of course big untrue. I place my presence on inclosed form of letter and believe this will avoid the trouble of penalty of same. As Mr. —— is most religious and competent man, also heavily upright and godly, it fears me that useless to apply for his signature. Please therefore attach same at Yokohama office, making forge. But no cause for fear of prison happenings, as this often happens by merchants of high integrity. But if this involves that your honor look mean and excessive awkward for business purpose, I think more better a little serpentlike wisdom of polite manhood and thus found good business edifice." The firm knows as much now about the delay as it did before.

The Simple Village Belle.

She is a simple village belle
Whom we, perforce, admire.
No splendid effort to be "swell"
Is shown in her attire.
Her shirt waist is both neat and white.
She wears a flowered bonnet.
In olden times so fair a sight
Would have inspired a sonnet.

She strolls along unconscious that
By all she is adored.
What think you if I tell you flat
She's here for summer board;
That, though attired with simpleness,
Expert dressmaking scholars
Assert her unassuming dress
Cost just two hundred dollars?
—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Judge.

Stood Up For Him.

Dolan—So Casey was runnin' me down an' ye stood up for me?

Callahan—Oi did. Oi sez to him, "Casey," sez Oi, "ye're honest an' truthful an' ye're no coward, an' ye work hard an' pay yer dibts, an' ye don't git drunk an' lick yer wolfe, but in other respects ye're no better than Dolan!"—Human Life.

To Taper the Fingers.

Most women in trying to make their fingers more taper will stroke them from the base to the tip. A well known manicure has said that the process should be reversed.

Clasp the tip of each finger between the thumb and first finger of opposite hand and stroke firmly but gently backward from the tip as when working on a glove.

Decreasing Weight In Summer.

To the many persons who desire to reduce their avoirdupois the good old summer time offers a ready and simple solution to their problem.

The surest way to reduce flesh without adopting means that will strain or weaken the body or system is to WEAR A WOOLEN SWEATER on warm days and take walks or other moderate exercise. Jockeys, prizefighters and other athletes to whom weight is a vital matter follow this plan.

The discomfort of the heavy garment in warm weather decreases as the person becomes accustomed to the procedure, and the burden becomes less onerous day by day.

Of course if a person will wear the sweater and perform some violent forms of exercise his weight will decrease all the more rapidly.

A. S. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

"Texas" will be the attraction at Garman's Opera House on Sept. 17. "Texas" is not, as its name might imply, a melodrama but a high class comedy drama of the type of 'Arizona' and 'The Virginian.' "Texas" is from the pen of a daughter of the Lone Star State, Jane Mauldin Feigl and Broadhurst and Currie the well known New York managers are sponsors for this production, which is said to be an elaborate one in every respect.

We enjoyed a delighttul little call made at "The Republican" office, on Tuesday, by P. M. Bennison, of Pittsburg, a son of Captain Bennison, of Howard. The latter has not been so well for some time past, but we are glad to say is improving and hopes to be about as usual before long. Just like the good Republican that he is, Captain Bennison was desirous of marking up his copy of "The Republican" a year in advance and not being able to make the call himself he commissioned his son, "Mac" to attend to it. "Mac." is one of the hustling salesmen of the Arbuckles Coffee Company, of Pittsburg. Many of his friends in the smoky city are the friends of the editor of "The Republian", so that our little chat was all the more interesting. Later in the day he attended the business men's picnic and hobnobbed about with Professor Milton S. McDowell, of State College, who doesn't have much use for a title, but who can give some other professors cards and spades, for all of that.

Mrs. Oliver Eby departed, yesterday, for Brookville where she will visit her parents.

Dr. Thos. C. VanTries returned from his trip to the seashore and New England, on Monday evening. He was delighted with Boston, its many points of historic interest, and the graves of its distinguished men. It abounds in cemeteries containing the tombs of the illustrious dead. Mount Auburn is the grandest of them all. Here rest the remains of James Russel Lowell, H. W. Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes and other poets; also Edward Everett, Charlotte Cushman. The doctor also visited East Northfield and Mount Hermon, famous as the home of the late D. L. Moody, and the scene of his most practical labors. Both schools are deservedly popular. At his tomb on Little Round Top, christian workers delight to gather every Sabbath evening for vesper services during the summer conference held at East Northfield. The doctor also spent some time among the Berkshire Hills, of Western Massachusetts, visiting Lenox, Lee, Stockbridge, Great Barrington, and North Adams. Near the latter place is the Hoosac tunnel, five miles long; also Graylock Mountain, the highest point in the state of Massachusetts. The scenery among the Berkshire Hills is grand and inspiring, many wealthy New Yorkers have their summer homes among them. Jonathan Edwards, William Cullen Bryant, Rufus Choate, and other distinguished men of the past, had homes here. The doctor's trip was rendered more interesting by having his son, Rev. Wm. P. VanTries, with him most of the time.
